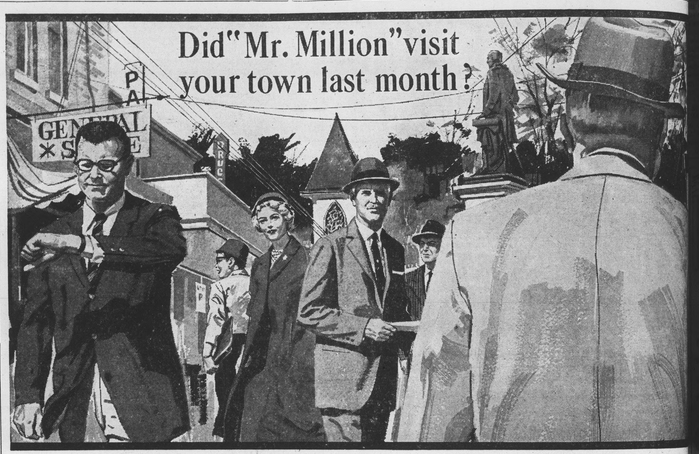
Did "Mr. Million" visit your town last month?



He may have — as he travelled from town to town, seeking the one best suited for his million-dollar industrial plant. But site-seeking is a highly secret operation. Locations are studied quietly, confidentially, by men who may appear to be casual tourists. And if a town fails to meet their requirements, they move on. Many a community has lost a million-dollar plant . . . without even knowing it had been considered!

Put Your Best Foot Forward!

New plants mean new jobs, new opportunities, new prosperity. So if your town is actively interested in industrial development, it should encourage industry. It should be progressive . . . up-to-date. Most of all, it should by its attitude, make industry understand it is wanted — that new business would find a climate in which it could grow. Talk up your town — "Mr. Million" may be visiting in your midst tomorrow!
